Blanche: Herb, if you don't stop snoring, I'm going to toss you out on your ear!

Herb: Does it upset you that much?

Blanche: Not just me, the entire congregation.

Every morning for years, at about 11:30, the telephone operator in a small Sierra-Nevada town received a call from a man asking the exact time. One day the operator summoned up nerve enough to ask him why the regularity.

"I'm foreman of the local sawmill," he explained. "Every day, I have to blow the whistle at noon, so I call you to get the exact time." The operator giggled, "That's odd," she said. "All this time, we've been setting our clock by your whistle."

A woman reported the disappearance of her husband to the police. The officer in charge looked at the photograph she handed him, questioned her, and then asked if she wished to give her husband any message if they found him.

"Yes," she replied readily. "Tell him Mother didn't come after all."

WORRY

Want to worry? Keep these few things in mind. Most things people worry about haven't happened yet, and probably never will. Some people worry about terrible things that have happened in the past, but since they've already happened, no amount of worry can change them. Other people worry about small, insignificant things that aren't worth worrying about. Genuine problems, of course, deserve a certain amount of concern, but that's intelligent – worrying isn't! And if one can do little or nothing to provide solutions for problems, what good does worrying about them do?

Spender

The fountains flash across his lawn,
His yard is full of flowers.
His house has thirty rooms or more
With a dozen showers.
He slumbers in a massive bed
Some king once owned, it seems.
The table where he eats is long,
And silver brightly gleams.
He drives a gleaming mammoth car
That has the latest shape.
He sits before a mighty desk
And reads a ticker tape.
He goes to church when Sunday comes;
He sits up very straight,
And with a pious look he drops
A dollar in the plate!
